Introduction and Course Overview

You will spend the first part of the day getting to know participants and discussing what will take place during the course. Participants will also have an opportunity to identify their personal learning objectives.

The Learning Organization

The idea that organizations and people should strive to continually evolve and learn has been coming into prominence over the last decade. During this session, we will explore what this means and how we can get started.

The Five Disciplines

The morning will be spent discussing Peter Senge's five disciplines: personal mastery, mental models, shared vision, team learning, and systems thinking.

Leadership

One key tool for developing your leadership skills is the Situational Leadership Model developed by Paul Hersey.

The Five Practices

James Kouzes and Barry Posner are two other well-known researchers who have done a tremendous amount of work on leadership, and their findings complement Peter Senge's work. They have identified five practices they feel should be a part of every leader's skill set. We will look at each practice closely and help you identify some ways to incorporate it into your leadership skill set.

Trust

Trust may very well be one of the most important determiners of employer-employee relationships. We will explore some ways that participants can build trust with their employees.

Change

Managing change well is a key part of being a manager. We will take a close look at William Bridges' change cycle. Participants will also have an opportunity to apply the cycle to situations from their own lives.

The Four Room Apartment

This model is another way of looking at change. We will examine each room and we will look at ways to move people from one room to another.

Time Management

Managing your time well is another crucial leadership skill. Participants will practice this skill through a time management case study, followed by some simple organizational tips and techniques.

Managers vs. Leaders

Warren Bennis has written many books on becoming a leader. We will look at some of his insights on what makes a manager different from a leader.

Types of Thinking

There are several models that you can apply to your thinking to help you achieve maximum results. We will discuss two models and apply them to an ethical dilemma.

Influence Strategies

At the very core of leadership is the ability to influence people. There are many ways that we can influence people. This session will focus on the six methods that Robert Cialdini has identified.

Relationships

Early on in the course, we looked at the concept of systems thinking. This session takes that concept and applies it to relationships. We will look at the relationship system and how participants can use it to better coach a team through conflict.

Problem Solving

There are many approaches that you can use to solve a problem. We will discuss a simple eight-step method and then participants will apply that method to a personal problem.

Delegation

One of a manager's biggest challenges is what to delegate, to whom, and how. We will take an in-depth look at some key delegation techniques, and then participants will practice those techniques in a role play.

Criteria for Useful Feedback

This session will look at the nine criteria for useful feedback. We will also see the value of good feedback through a group exercise.

Feedback Techniques

In this session, we will continue our work with feedback by looking at some feedback techniques. Participants will then practice those techniques through a role-play.

Body Language

Just as important as what you say is how you say it. During this session participants will learn how to make sure that their body is sending the same message as their words.

Meetings

Leaders are often asked to hold, attend, and/or facilitate meetings. We will look at each of these roles and identify some ways that leaders can make the most of their time in each role.

Skillful Speaking

Public speaking is an opportunity leaders must learn to grasp at every opportunity. During this session, participants will learn seven ways to pump up a presentation.

Course Wrap-Up

At the end of the day, participants will have an opportunity to ask questions.
